20-on-20:

The Top Greed Stocks of the Last 20 Years and Exactly When to Buy Them

By Michael Carr

IN Precision Profits, we target the best of the best stocks by leveraging a seasonal filter to narrow down our set of opportunities.

And we use the Greed Gauge to tell us exactly when to trade them.

To give you an idea of how effective this is, an incredible 94.3% of stocks in the S&P 500 were profitable when holding only on Greed Gauge buy signals.

Of course, some stocks deliver better returns than others — which is why I’ve done so much additional work to make the Precision Profits strategy even more lucrative.

Name	Symbol	Average Annual Return		Best Two Months	Best Month	Second Best Month

Royal Caribbean Cruises Ltd.	RCL	8.0%		69.5%	November	February
Advanced Micro Devices, Inc.	AMD	7.9%		67.4%	August	October
APA Corporation	APA	7.8%		59.8%	March	November
Intuitive Surgical, Inc.	ISRG	7.6%		66.3%	July	March
Apple Inc.	AAPL	7.6%		35.8%	August	April

Part of that work was figuring out what the Greed Gauge says are the best stocks of the last two decades. In the table below, I've put together the 20 best-performing Greed Gauge stocks of the last 20 years. It's sorted by the average annual return...

But in the fourth column, you'll see the return when holding the respective stocks for only the two best (greediest) months of the year.

This shows you the importance of incorporating seasonality into a profit-maximizing strategy.

And why, with Precision Profits, we don't simply buy a stock when it turns green on the Greed Gauge.

All traders have limited capital... so our goal is to allocate capital as efficiently as possible.

That's why buying call options on a stock, ONLY when it flashes a Greed Gauge buy signal and ONLY during seasonably favorable times...

Can help us dramatically outperform the broad stock market with less risk.

Now, our options trades won't always be based on stocks in the list you see here. That's because each month, I prepare a newly updated list of the top 25 stocks to follow based on seasonality.

To that, I apply the Greed Gauge, which lets us know the exact best moments to get in and out for the top companies in their greediest months.

All you have to do is follow the system's buy and sell signals for a chance to benefit from the combined forces of seasonality and my Greed Gauge.

Regards,

Michael Carr
